

Sinclair Broadcasting is forcing their stations to air a anti-John Kerry infomercial right before the election - -obviously in an attempt to influence an election --is that legal. TV networks are bound by certain rules because they use the public airways free of charge.
What force do you have at the FCC to stop this? If it was any other network organization, would it be allowed? It's these kinds of things that are starting to scare me in this great country. We have the FCC to help protect citizens and our elections from this sort of illegal activities by communications companies. PLEASE HELP.
